

Map of Motherhood

by Gulus G. Turkmen (Author)

There are dozens of theories and hundreds of books explaining what kind of a parent you should become. However not only every parent, but also every child and every culture is unique. Be the one to determine the rightway for yourself with the help of a game called "Map of Motherhood".

You surely belong to a culture regarding which continent you grew up in. You certainly have specific concerns following the period and the land on which you are parenting. And you definitely have your own way to get through the child's tantrums according to your own personality.

Gulus G. Turkmen has been observing the modern parenting styles since she founded her portal AlternatifAnne.com (Alternative Mothering) in 2010. Since then she wrote two books, "Beyond Motherhood" and "The Map of Motherhood" based on her researches about the modern motherhood movements and cultural distinctions. The Map of Motherhood argues for an internationally viable approach to "Sustainable Good Parenting". This is her first book to be translated into English.

Turkmen invites you to have a chat about the different habits, needs and beliefs we have about childcare and how the different cultures we meet affect our way of parenting.

"Map of Motherhood is a comprehensive guide to parenthood. Gulus is very curious, observant, and passionate. It is a great book for all parents, even for those who consider themselves as experts in child development! The reason is because there is always one more avenue to discover or re-evaluate, and Gulus delivers that mindset effortlessly with easy-to-understand, real stories backed with expert commentary."
